Campaign: “Breathe Again in the Grampians”

Lecturer: Chris Taylor

SECTION 1 – Campaign Overview

1. Campaign line:
“Breathe Again. The Grampians
Where rejuvenation starts”
2. Tone of Voice: Adventurous, Emotional, Sensory, Inviting, Free, Rejuvenating
3. Proposition: Get away to the Grampians.
4. Core Idea: Nature as the rhythm of breath, inhale freedom, exhale connection.
5. Creative Objective: Encourage Australians to reconnect with themselves and their loved ones through a nature-driven, emotionally rich weekend escape in The Grampians.

SECTION 2 – Written Executions

Execution 1:

Friday: Wine and welcome

With bubbles in hand, start the weekend by rolling into Halls Gap with your girls. As the vines bloom alive again in the spring, let the Grampians embrace you with a cheeky glass of sparkling rosé. Imagine soft linen, fairy lights, and a backdrop of mountain peaks perfect for golden-hour photography when you book a stylish boutique stay or glamping tent. We gave you a sense of freedom and artistic vibes that everyone may desire at that precise moment, creating a memory you will always cherish when you return to your normal life.

Saturday: Scenic trails & slow luxury

Before enjoying an easy stroll to Silverband Falls, start your day slowly with coffee and freshly made sourdough. Take those group photos beneath the walkways bordered by wildflowers and the tumbling stream. Indulgence is in order for the afternoon: an intimate meal at the Royal Mail Hotel, where each course is presented aesthetically and paired with regional wine. Then, as the ranges blush pink, enjoy the sunset with cocktails after a 90-minute spa treatment or mineral bath to relieve city-weary muscles.

Shopping Sunday

Visit Grampians Providore, an adorable shop on Dunkeld's main street, to finish the journey. We allow you to lose yourself in the sweetness of melted chocolate, fragrant cheese, local wine, and golden olive oil. The perfect weekend memory is to take a final group selfie with kangaroos hopping in the background before you head out.

Execution 2:

Friday Night: Team Goal

You set out on a thrilling journey today over the Grampians Peaks Trail, which runs 12.1 kilometers along the ridgeline from Mount Zero to Barigar. At the trailhead campsite, we pitched tents while exchanging stories and guidelines. On the first night, take a deep inhalation of nature to get equipped for the next day's exploration.

Saturday: Bond & Climb

Then, before dawn, we begin our journey to Flat Rock, which is hazardous and rocky from the first step. The chance to chase sunrise is yours here. You reach Taipan Wall in the middle of the morning, where your whole body must be tense when climbing and must cling to the 360-degree vertical orange walls with giant sandstone blocks. Breathing is difficult and sweat flows; your body is alive and functioning at its peak in the outdoors. You witness life at its most basic level here. Your senses are awakened as the sun rises above the horizon, bathing the ranges in gold. High fives everywhere. This is the reason you came.

One last push to Barigar campground. Tents fly up with teamwork magic. The camp stove hisses, pasta boils, and you're circled around one massive pot that tastes gourmet.

Sunday: The exit

Before heading to the parking lot, enjoy a lazy morning with coffee and snap a group portrait. The forest and mountain welcome tranquility and recharge you. Reaching outdoors and taking in Mother Earth's incredible vitality leaves you feeling rejuvenated.

Execution 3:

Friday: Into the Quiet

The journey to the Western Grampians offers golden paddocks, an infinite sky, and a serene haven near Cavendish, where windows frame nothing but trees and twilight, and timber floors groan softly. Stop at Mirranatwa Gap overlook for endless panoramas as you drive through the Victoria Valley. Enjoy local Shiraz, butter-soft lamb, and lively discussions at the Bunyip Hotel before time ends tonight.

Saturday: Wander Without Words

Morning light streaming in through the drapes, waking tangled in warm linen. Travel to Silverband Falls, where the water flows over stone like silk before vanishing into the ground, seemingly concealing secrets.

At the Royal Mail Hotel, lunch lasts throughout the afternoon, with each course lasting an hour and every look a language: how you chuckle and the manner in which your fingers connect with one another across the table. Drive to Reeds Lookout in the evening to see the whole Victoria Valley become pink. Time is immobile.

Sunday: Final Morning

Slowly wake up, have coffee in bed, warm skin, and a richer heart. Stroll the Settlers of Cavendish The smell of eucalyptus, the sound of birds, and your own footsteps as you stroll alongside the Wannon River. Get a bottle of wine to keep when you stop by Grampians Providore. One day, you can pour that memories again. The Grampians allowed you to be private, to be close, and to love without distraction.

Execution 4:

VISUAL (Camera Direction & Scene)	AUDIO (Voiceover / Sound)
[0:00–0:05] From the hotel's outside, the drone glides softly into the Deluxe Mountain View suite. A panoramic picture of the Gariwerd Mountains is shown as the camera moves through the glass door. Slowly, like a long sigh, the camera zooms out.	SFX: Soft ambient music, deep breathing sounds. VO: “Welcome to the place where time sleeps, where every breath is a new moment.”
[0:06–0:12] Scene in the room: afternoon light pouring in, king bed facing the mountain. Light fills the room as the pair enters and opens the balcony. To highlight the light coming in, the camera steadily zooms in.	VO: “In the Deluxe Mountain View room, you'll be immersed in wooden architecture, heated floors, a private balcony just the two of you, and the mountain view.” On-screen text: Deluxe Mountain View Room – from AU$495/night.
[0:13–0:22] The Parker Street Project scene inside the Royal Mail Hotel shifts to an open area with flickering flames and a table. Close-up: food dishes, red wine glasses, and their hands lightly touching. From the dining table, the camera pans out a little to show the remainder of the room.	SFX: silverware, wine glasses, faint whispers. VO: “At Parker St Project, meals are unhurried—you choose from a modern à la carte menu, using garden-sourced and local ingredients.” On-screen text: Parker St Project, 98 Parker St, Dunkeld, VIC. Lunch Friday–Saturday, Dinner Wednesday–Saturday. The menu changes seasonally. Open: Friday and Saturday lunch from 12pm, Wednesday to Saturday dinner from 5:30pm.
[0:23–0:30] An image showing the chef setting the speciality meal on the table. The camera first focuses on the meticulous dish arrangement, then on the wine pouring precision, and then it pans out to show the full table. Their eyes are full with passion as they lift their glasses.	VO: "Eating at the Royal Mail Hotel is a journey rather than just a meal. Soft lighting, Grampian wines, and locally farmed ingredients. Every dish serves as an invitation to indulge the senses, evoke memories, and create a night that will never be forgotten.

[0:31–0:40] After dinner, they're back in the room. They open the night balcony and gaze at the distant, shadowy mountains. From the balcony, the camera shifts to the illuminated window. After focusing on the contented expression, the camera pans out to capture the expansive scene.	SFX: Wind and a gentle piano. VO: "A new chapter begins as night falls: a private balcony, a silent TV, a Nespresso cup—just you and the moment."
[0:41–0:50] The following morning, when the sun peaks through the curtains, they enjoy coffee while gazing at the mountains. The steaming cup of coffee is the subject of the camera. After focusing on the coffee cup, the camera pans out to show the distant mountains in a panoramic view.	VO: "To get up here is not being woken up in the commotion, but to open your eyes quietly while enjoying a cup of coffee in the great nature."
[0:51–1:00] The couple walked hand in hand out into the hotel hallway, looking back at the room and restaurant before leaving. The drone slowly retreated. The camera zoomed out as if in a last breath of relief. The logo appeared.	Text displayed on the screen: "Royal Mail Hotel – Breathe, love, and escape. The Grampians" SFX: Slow breathing, piano outro. VO: "Reserve your turn. Reset your lungs with The Grampians. The Royal Mail Hotel"
